From time to time, the skies just don't seem as gracious as they did in yesteryear. Companies are charging ridiculous fees while getting rid of services that were, back in the day, thought to be normal. There are some airlines though, particularly smaller airlines like Caribbean Airlines that are bringing friendly back to the skies you fly as long as you're going to the destinations they service. There are tons of positive things you might want to mull over when it comes to flying Caribbean Airlines. Below are just a few of the advantages you might want to bear in mind as you judge against your choices and arrange to set out on your Caribbean vacation.

The decor and nature of Caribbean airlines planes may be an attention getter right off the bat. Caribbean is by far and large not your average airliner. The color scheme of the plane itself is designed to make you think of the islands and escaping the grind of your workplace. Even Caribbean airlines employees wear the colors purple blue and green. The official logo of the airline is a hummingbird to represent the island of Trinidad. The Caribbean airlines are represented by the five different tail designs. The cricket balls, butterflies, corals and fish, fruits and steelpan are a few of the designs you will see. Recurrent travelers to the Caribbean can appreciate membership in Club Caribbean. This is one club in where membership certainly has its freedom. Of course, this is only beneficial if you are a recurrent traveler to the Caribbean and believe you'll be flying with Caribbean Airlines for all or a majority of that travel. Some advantages include: 10% discount on things you buy in the Caribbean Airlines Gift Shop which can be found in the Piarco International Airport in Trinidad, discounted room upgrades at specified partner hotels, priority in boarding and baggage handling, the right to use business class hospitality lounges, and priority grade for all standby Caribbean Airlines flights. There is a charge for the membership and memberships can be obtained for singles, couples, and additionally in corporate packages.

Traveling business class on a Caribbean Airlines flight is at least as good as the first class service of many other airlines. This doesn't mean that economy class passengers are left completely in the dark but there are plenty of perks available for upgrading to business class with Caribbean Airlines. You'll find that business class is a great value when you experience all the perks. Among them are things like dedicated check-in, a special lounge to enjoy while awaiting takeoff, and the ability to enjoy priority booking. You have a range of selections offered to you when putting together your travel plans for Caribbean vacations. Some of them may seem like bigger bargains at first glance but when you compare the prices side by side with what you get from flying Caribbean Airlines you'll see that there are plenty of reasons to look a little bit closer at this airline that is quickly becoming the largest airline in the Caribbean. When you take the time to balance the rivals the likelihood is increased that you'll discover that Caribbean Airlines has much to offer you and those you are traveling with for you next Caribbean vacation.
